

mBIT Global Wisdom Support Network First Sunday of each month

mBraining4Success is delighted to announce that it has set up and will host the mBIT Global Wisdom Support Network. The group is designed to provide ongoing support and networking for mBIT Coaches and Trainers regardless of where you trained or who you trained with. A chance to network and find out where and how mBIT is being used and a chance to share updates from your own learning and explorations.

I will be hosting, organising and facilitating the group to enable it to happen smoothly over time and to get it well established – but beyond that I see it as a partnership of support moving forward – with all parties having a vested interest for making it work.

My thinking so far is:

- To run the group once a month at a time to accommodate as many people as possible across a range of countries (this will mean as daylight saving etc changes we may flip from morning to evening sessions throughout the year so it is not always mornings for one group of people – and we will try to avoid timings which are too antisocial)
- To run the group through a teleconferencing service (using a US service provider – so check your own phone prices for international calls and consider phone cards options locally, some of which give local rates for international calling)
- To manage the group in such a way that:
 - Everyone gets a chance to contribute and share over time
 - We can offer both content sessions (where someone leads a session around a topic) and peer supervision (where people share experiences and get input from others of how to do things even better)
 - The group can evolve and grow to meet the needs and desires of those who come along

I am delighted that the other master trainers are also keen to support the group and get involved – so we will make sure that over the year they lead sessions so you have a broad range of input and support from a variety of perspectives. I am also hoping to persuade Grant to do some guest sessions from time to time and to occasionally join our conversations.

Any and all of this is up for remodelling and I am sure it will evolve as it goes ahead.

So with compassion, creativity and courage – I look forward to sharing with you

Suzanne Henwood
